

Service Animals and Emotional Support Animals

Eligible reimbursement must be for out-of-pocket expenses related to purchase and/or training of one animal per eligible recipient, up to a lifetime maximum (see below). Recipient must provide written recommendation from a licensed mental health professional/eligible provider. Reimbursement requests for service animal or emotional support animal must be submitted within 3 years from the date of service.

Ineligible expenses include, but are not limited to, animal care (i.e., veterinary services, vaccinations, grooming, accessories, consumable products such as food, medicine, or medical supplies).

Service Animals

- The Americans with Disabilities Act (ADA) defines service animals as those trained to do work or perform specific functions for the benefit of an individual with a mental or physical disability.
- According to Title II and III of the ADA, service animals are limited to dogs. However, miniature horses are allowed if they have been individually trained to do work or perform tasks for individuals with disabilities.
- The work or tasks performed by a service animal must be directly related to the individual's disability. A doctor's letter does not turn an animal into a service animal; a service animal has received specialized training to perform a task for the person with a disability.
- Reimbursement Process:
 - Reimbursement for the purchase and/or specialized training of one service animal per eligible recipient, up to the survivor's lifetime maximum of $10,000;
 - Must be recommended by a licensed mental health professional/eligible provider;
 - Must be for the purchase and/or specialized training of one qualified service animal;
 - Must submit provider's written recommendation, evidence of specialized training and expenses incurred, pursuant to the established reimbursement request process;
 - Service animals are considered medical equipment, so the eligible recipient must first submit all claims for service animals through their personal medical insurance, if any. The Fund will provide reimbursement for any remaining, unreimbursed eligible expenses up to the lifetime maximum.

* If costs associated with a service animal exceed the survivor's lifetime maximum of $10,000.00, additional documentation must be submitted for consideration.

Emotional Support Animals

- Emotional support animals are not considered service animals by the ADA. These support animals provide companionship, relieve loneliness, and sometimes help with depression, anxiety, and certain phobias. Other than obedience training, they do not have specialized training to perform tasks that assist people with disabilities. The terms "therapy animal" and "emotional support animal" may be used interchangeably,* but for purposes of this eligible service, the following applies:
 - Therapy animals are used in-house by licensed mental health professionals with specialized training in animal-assisted therapy;
 - Emotional support animals reside with the individual to assist with emotional, psychiatric, or cognitive disabilities and do not require specific training.

* The terms "service animal" and "emotional support animal" are used solely for purposes of coverage by the Fund and should not be relied upon for any other purposes.

- Reimbursement Process:
 - Cover in-house animal-assisted therapy with a licensed mental health professional/eligible provider, not otherwise covered by the eligible recipient's medical insurance, if any;
 - Reimbursement for the purchase and/or obedience training of one emotional support animal up to the survivor's lifetime maximum of $5,000*;
 - o Must be recommended by a licensed mental health professional/eligible provider;
 - o Must be for the purchase and/or obedience training of one emotional support animal;
 - Must submit provider recommendation and evidence of expenses incurred, pursuant to the established reimbursement request process.

 If costs associated with an emotional support animal exceed the survivor's lifetime maximum of $5,000.00, additional documentation must be submitted for consideration.
